

WHY ARE TEST CENTRES EMBARKING ON THE ICDL?

Simple. It adds value. How?

By:

- Establishing a tangible ICT literacy standard
- Helping to ensure consistent and desired levels of ICT knowledge
- Incorporating elements of basic computer skills in the curriculum
- Helping students prepare the information age
- Retaining staff
- Reducing IT Help Desk costs and training costs

Here are some of the things our test centres are saying:

WAVERLEY CHRISTIAN COLLEGE:

“It was a recognised external qualification” and “we needed a program that was very flexible and non-threatening.”

- Daisy Foley, Assistant Principal

THE HUTCHINS SCHOOL:

“...an internationally recognised ICT qualification was seen as attractive.”

- Peter Symons, Head of Business Enterprise, Society and Technology

MARCELLIN COLLEGE:

“To improve staff skills and as a means of gauging staff computer literacy.”

“To provide students with a means of getting their computer skills internationally accredited.”

“To improve IT literacy across the whole College population.”

- Mark Stanton, Head of IT

THE GIRLS GRAMMAR SCHOOL ROCKHAMPTON:

“Certificate of skills and keeping all teachers up to date with their computing skills.”

- Shakira Hick, Head of IT

Why not share your comments with the ICDL?

Email your stories, quotes or good news to scott.hansen@acs.org.au