

IT Trainee Of The Year Award Goes To ICDL Holder

VICTEC Limited, one of our Victoria Test Centres has announced the winner of their IT Trainee of the Year award.

20 year old Megan Wasylewski of Geelong recently won I.T. trainee of the year at the annual VICTEC awards ceremony held in Melbourne. Attended by host employers, leaders in industry, friends and family, Megan overcame tough competition to take the award, winning a tablet computer valued at over $4000.00

Megan has spent the last twelve months gaining hands on experience working for the I.T. helpdesk with host employer "The Royal Children's Hospital"

She has achieved a great deal in the past twelve months. Studying and reaching a qualification in "Certificate IV in Network Management" and the "International Computer Driving Licence", whilst traveling the long journey from Geelong to Melbourne each day, and working in a highly pressurised working environment.

Host employer Mark Taglietti said "Megan has proven to be a true asset to the hospital. Her knowledge gained through the traineeship and study during the last twelve months, compounded by a tremendous level of hard work, and recognition of this award, makes Megan a valuable commodity in the work place. It also cements the importance of traineeship programs such as the Youth Employment Scheme and I.T. literacy qualifications such as ICDL"

In addition to winning the award, The Royal Children's Hospital have recognised Megan's success and offered her a permanent position of employment. The journey for Megan has included a transition from IT Trainee to full time employee, achieved in 12 months, and recognised by her great win.

VICTEC are proud to have had the opportunity to work with Megan, The Royal Children's Hospital and Australian Computer Society, and wish her the best for an exciting and fulfilling career in Information Technology.
